

"Declaration of Rights for the Elderly"

To add life to the years that have been added to life.

The following principles were approved by the United Nations' General Assembly on 16th November 1991. Resolution 46/91.

INDEPENDENCE

Older persons should have access to adequate food, clothing and health care through the provision of income, family and community support and self-help.

Older persons should have the opportunity to work or have access to other income generating opportunities.

Older persons should be able to participate in determining when and at what pace withdrawal from the labour force takes place.

Older persons should have access to appropriate educational and training programmes.

Older persons should be able to live in environments that are safe and adaptable to personal preferences and changing conditions.

Older persons should be able to reside at home for as long as possible.

PARTICIPATION

Older persons should remain integrated in society, participate actively in the formulation and implementation of policies that directly affect their well-being and share their knowledge and skills with younger generations.

Older persons should be able to seek and develop opportunities for service to the community and serve as volunteers in positions appropriate to their interests and capabilities.

Older persons should be able to form movements or associations of older persons.

CARE

Older persons should benefit from family and community care and protection in accordance with each society's system of cultural values.

Older persons should have access to health care to help them maintain or regain the optimum level of physical, mental and emotional well-being and to prevent or delay the onset of illness.

Older persons should have access to social and legal services to enhance their autonomy, protection and care.

Older persons should be able to utilise appropriate levels of institutionalised care providing protection, rehabilitation and social and mental stimulation in a humane and secure environment.

Older persons should be able to enjoy human rights and fundamental freedoms when residing in any shelter, care or treatment facility including full respect for their dignity, beliefs, needs and privacy and for the right to make decisions about their care and quality of their lives.

SELF-FULFILMENT

Older persons should be able to pursue opportunities for the development of their potential.

Older persons should have access to the educational, cultural, spiritual and recreational resources of society.

DIGNITY

Older persons should be able to live in dignity and security and be free from exploitation and physical and mental abuse.

Older persons should be treated fairly regardless of age, gender, racial or ethnic background, disability or other status and be valued independently of their economic contribution.

The Aged are valuable, treat them that way.
